

We will set out from Nový Jičín to the destination of our trip, the town of Přebor, via Libhošť.

Libhošť is a local part of the town of Nový Jičín and is situated between Nový Jičín and Přebor in a valley between the slopes of Libhošťská hůrka and Břehy. The first time it was mentioned in writing was in 1481.

The town of Přebor is one of the oldest towns in north-east Moravia. The first time it was mentioned in writing was in 1251. It is situated on both banks of the Lubina River. The town is lined from three sides with the beautiful scenery of the Beskydy foothills with a view of Štramberk Trúba, Hukvaldy and renowned Radhošť. The town can boast a rich history.

Přebor is the birthplace and place of work of many prominent personalities, who have made it famous. St. Jan Sarkander lived here with his mother and attended the local parish school. Antonín Cyril Stojan, the later archbishop, studied the local lower grammar school and then worked as a curate for eleven years. Řehoř Wolný, a historian and the founder of Moravian topography, Bonifác Buzek, a philosopher and a national awakener, František Juráň, an academic sculptor, Josef Krešta, a writer, and others were born here.

The most prominent native of Přebor is Prof. MUDr. Sigmund Freud, a world-known doctor and the founder of psychoanalysis. He lived here through his earliest childhood years. In Přebor we will find his Native Home, on whose right side of the eastern front a bronze memorial plaque has been placed. This house is a museum with a unique exposition, which presents Sigmund Freud as a humour lover, a collector of jokes and an author of many quotations.

Sigmund Freud's Museum and Memorial Hall are undoubtedly also worth visiting. There is a permanent exhibition, which will guide you through the history of the town of Přebor from its foundation by Přemysl Otakar II in 1251 up to the present day. In 1969 the museum was enlarged with the memorial hall of Dr. Sigmund Freud, a native of Přebor and the famous founder of psychoanalysis.
